Viking Fire

Synopsis

856 CE, Ireland is a land of myth, magic, and blood. Viking raiders have fought the Irish for over half a century. Rival Irish clans promise only betrayal and carnage. Kaireen, daughter of Laird Liannon, is suddenly forced into an arranged marriage with her sworn enemy, a Viking. She refuses to submit. With no mention of love, only land and the protection of her clan, she endeavors to get her betrothed banished from her country. Will love find its way around her stubborn heart? Bram, the Viking, finds himself without future or inheritance as a younger son in his family. A marriage to the Lairdâ™s daughter would grant him land if he swears fidelity and if his men will fight along with the Liannons against any foe - Irish or Viking. However, the Lairdâ™s feisty daughter only holds animosity for him and his kind. Is marriage worth the battle scars of such a relentless opponent? With the blame for a rival Lairdâ™s death treacherously set against the Liannons, Kaireen and Bram must find a way to lay aside their differences as an unforeseen darkness sends death snapping at their heels. This is a new release of a previously published edition.

Find this review and more at Lusty Penguin Reviews! Viking Fire, by Andrea R. Cooper, captivates with its wonderful blend of historical romance and mystery. Using colorful historical details, Cooper beautifully captures the setting, Ireland 865 CE, and the attitudes of the era, successfully drawing the reader into this story. When the daughter of Laird Liannon, Kaireen, learns that she must marry with Viking Bram, son of Ragnar, she is outraged that her father would demand such a thing. The Vikings have attacked Irish lands in the past, and headstrong Kaireen does not want to be wed to a Viking. Moreover, Kaireen knows that there is a spy in the keep and worries that, maybe, Bram is that spy. Kaireen cares about the defending the safety of the castle and is proficient with a sword as well as a bow and arrow, which I loved about her character. Kaireen's feistiness turns to stubbornness as she steadfastly refuses to marry Bram because she doesn't love him. Bram positively adores Kaireen and has since the very first time he saw her. He loves her hot-blooded nature and her compassion, knowing these characteristics will help them raise strong warrior sons. A patient man who gently teases Kaireen and defends her people, Bram shows Kaireen his love for her. These actions and words allow Kaireen to slowly realize that she might have feelings for Bram too, which endeared his character to me. Bram knows that Kaireen is falling for him even if her head hasn't caught up to what her heart already knows. When Kaireen finally admits that she loves him, I couldn't help but smile. Bram and Kaireen are a fantastic couple.

I must confess that in the past, I would have probably walked right on by Viking Fire. It wouldn't have been for any reason other than this particular period of history hasn't always captured my interest. However when I was approached to review this, I decided to leap into the unknown and I was very pleasantly surprised. There was plenty of action, mystery and intrigue, as well as wonderful chemistry between the hero and heroine. Kaireen is not excited at the prospect of being joined in marriage to Bram, a Viking raider. Being married off to a sworn enemy with no indication of a love match? "No, thank you" is her reaction. She vows to do whatever is in her power to prevent him becoming her husband. Bram is a younger son, and as a result, he has no defined future and no lands to inherit. He has agreed to marry the daughter of an Irish laird in exchange for land and loyalty. Despite Kaireen's utter reluctance to become his bride, he is drawn to her and does all he can to convince her otherwise. The chemistry between Kaireen and Bram is electric. Their opposing personalities bounce well against each other. Kaireen is headstrong and feisty, with absolutely no qualms about voicing her distaste for the situation. However Bram is calm and patient with Kaireen, and takes great joy in teasing and answering back (in other words, he's a real flirt). It was a lot of fun watching Kaireen battle against herself in regard to her feelings for Bram. Here's this man she wants so desperately to dislike, but he gets under her skin to the point where she finds resistance is harder to maintain than she expects. When Bram is wounded in a battle with other Lochlann raiders, Kaireen steps in to help him. You'd think she'd be lauded for this - oh, no...she gets punished.
